The Senate Intelligence Committee unanimously recommended that Adm. Stansfield Turner be confirmed as CIA director. The committee's chairman, Sen. Daniel K. Inouye (D-Hawaii), said he expected the full Senate to confirm the appointment sometime today. Turner during two days of testimony had told the committee he would resign as CIA director rather than carry out a presidential order for activities he felt were illegal. The admiral, 53, a former classmate of President Carter at the U.S. Naval Academy, will not be permitted to keep his commission. Turner also had pledged, Inouye said, to furnish the committee with information on covert and clandestine operations.
